[IMAGE] Overview of AutoCAD AutoCAD R14, released in November 2011, introduced significant changes to the AutoCAD Architecture in addition to a new feature set. The major changes can be summarized as: Flattening of the UI. Before the release of AutoCAD R14, every interface element (and almost every command) was related to a specific drawing object. Now commands are tied to the canvas and are essentially static (except for subcategories like drawing commands, which are now dynamically created as the user interacts with the canvas). There are some references to the Dunbar number, which is the number of people that you can keep track of on a first name basis. The Dunbar number is around 150, which is indeed rather low. ----- jimyjim "why are so many homeless people re-inventing the wheel?"
